When it comes to marketing, it's all about being innovative and creative. However, that creativity doesn't stop at copywriting, branding, or graphic design. Sometimes a marketer has to get creative with their budget.

There's a ton that goes into the marketing of a company, and that can make sticking within a budget hard. Fortunately, there are companies designed to make a marketer's life easier. For example, iStock by Getty Images.

As one of the world's leading royalty-free stock content marketplaces, and arguably the most popular, iStock offers millions of hand-picked premium images, illustrations, and videos. There truly isn't a shortage of options available and iStock even goes a step further with helpful tools and plugins. But the best part of iStock is their affordability.< /span>

With flexible pricing plans and low-cost credit packages, your money goes a long way; especially since you pay for the image, not the size.

No matter what your marketing team needs, iStock has a pricing plan that will work for you. For one-off situations, paying for the credits you need at a low price is more beneficial than a subscription. However, if you need multiple content throughout the month, iStock has subscription plans that start as low as $29 a month. From 10 images a month to 750, it's just about picking what works best for your team.

As a member, you also get access to FREE images, illustrations, and video clips each week. This free content is as high-quality as any other content you will find on their site; it's just a bonus that makes iStock even more important to have on hand.

Make your 2020 marketing strategy the best yet without hiking up the budget. Instead, check out the content and tools iStock has to offer and pick an affordable plan for your business today!
